09 GoPro Motorrad Grand Prix Deutschland

July 15 - SACHSENRING

The Sachsenring Circuit is another enclave with a great sporting tradition: car and bike races have been held on closed public roads in the area around the town of Chemnitz, Germany since the 1920s.

The new circuit was built five miles west Chemnitz in 1996 and although mainly used at the beginning as a driver training centre and road transport safety station, it hosted the first MotoGP™ Grand Prix in 1998. Numerous tight corners make it one of the slower tracks on the calendar but there is never shortage of close racing action.
